Consumer Awareness : How to Avoid Malware

Source: <https://consumer.ftc.gov/articles/how-recognize-remove-avoid-malware>

Scammers try to trick people into clicking on links that will download viruses, spyware, and other unwanted software — often by bundling it with free downloads. Here are ways to avoid malware:

- Install and update security software, and use a firewall. Set your security software, internet browser, and operating system to update automatically.
- Don't weaken your browser's security settings. You can minimize "drive-by" or bundled downloads if you keep your browser's default security settings.

- Read each screen when you install new software. If you don't recognize a program, or are prompted to install bundled software, decline the additional program or exit the installation process.
- Get well-known software directly from the source. Sites offering lots of different browsers, PDF readers, and other popular software for free are more likely to include malware.
- Pay attention to your browser's security warnings. Many browsers come with built-in security scanners that warn you before you visit an infected webpage or download a malicious file.
- Instead of clicking on a link in an email or text message, type the URL of a trusted site directly into your browser. Criminals send phishing emails that trick you into clicking on a link or opening an attachment that could download malware.
- Don't click on pop-ups or ads about your computer's performance. Scammers insert unwanted software into pop-up messages or ads that warn that your computer's security or performance is. Avoid clicking on these ads if you don't know the source.
- Scan USB drives and other external devices before using them. These devices can be infected with malware, especially if you use them in high traffic places, like photo printing stations or public computers.

If you think your computer has malware, report it to the Federal Trade Commission at ReportFraud.ftc.gov.
